Universidad Zaragoza

The Communication Studies Laboratory (LADECOM) of the University of Seville in collaboration with the Research Group in Communication and Digital Information (GICID) of the University of Zaragoza and Egregius conferences and events, summon the:

The II International Congress of Knowledge Nodes will be held on November 25 and 26, as a continuation of the first successful edition where more than 2,200 participants of 25 nationalities participated in more than 1,500 presentations generating about 12,000 interactions (questions, comments, answers ... ) during the days of the event.

The academic results of the event (12 important publications and hundreds of hours of video defenses, accessible for free) encourage and encourage us to promote a new edition that once again responds to the demand that the teaching and research community has for spaces that facilitate synergies between participants and the possibility of creating new strategic international collaboration networks.

To do this, we offer participants a wide range of thematic symposia and an optimized methodology and tools to facilitate participation, internal communication and academic promotion.

Participation will take place virtually and on a deferred basis. The organization has decided to do without live interventions to facilitate the participation of the speakers and that the event adapts to different schedules and agendas of the participants.

Proposals may be submitted in both Spanish, English, French, Italian or Portuguese.

Curricular results for participants
