ACADEMIC YEAR 2023-2024

The School of Medicine - University of Crete, announce that applications for the academic year 2023-2024 for the Graduate Program in "Exercise and exercise-based cardiac rehabilitation in patients with cardiac disease" are now open. Cardiac rehabilitation (CR) is a multidisciplinary process for patients recovering after an acute cardiac event or with chronic cardiovascular disease that reduces mortality and morbidity and improves quality of life. It is considered a cost-effective intervention and is expressly indicated in the guidelines of the major medical societies. The area of CR is still underdeveloped and the career across Europe is expected to grow and produce lot of job opportunities across. Cardiologists with a special training in cardiac rehabilitation have a critical role in supervising these programs or coordinate a cardiac rehabilitation center. In addition, since the population of patients with cardiovascular disease is increasing rapidly and prone to adverse events during exercise, other medical specialists with a focus in rehabilitation will gain a big precedence with this Program.
